Summary of the project (approx. 100 words)

The goal of this project was to examine what “cinema,” a modern medium with a history of over 125 years, means today in the contemporary techno-digital environment. The project focused on changes in current perceptions of cinema in the cultural spheres of Japan and Taiwan. Professor Wang and her graduate students participated in the talks by Professor Misawa and myself, and contributed with their excellent questions and ideas from their specialties in music and musicology related with cinema. This project also meant to examine the archive materials that are essential to the history of cinema, and we visited the Taiwan Film and Audiovisual Institute in Taipei during our stay in Taipei.
