Kamogawa Talk is a series of talk events jointly organized by Goethe-Institut Osaka Kyoto and Kyoto University Research Administration Office (KURA). It aims to invite neighbors of universities and cultural institutions to interact between each other, to foster exchange of the young generations, and share ideas and knowledge towards SDGs.

The 1st seminar focuses on the “Transnational Migration”. The Kyoto-DAAD Programme awardee will present their discoveries through their cooperative research with Germany and widely exchange ideas with participants from general public over the culture and academia. Participants of the seminar are also invited to join a networking event afterwards.

KAMOGAWA TALK - 日独交流の間(あいだ)から SDGs を考える
“Fostering cultural & academic interaction towards SDGs”

「ボーダーに挑むものたちーグローバル時代における「移民」の再考」

“The borders we build, the borders we cross – Migration in the global age”

With discourses on “identity” flaring up across the globe, what does research have to say about “nation”, “culture” and “ethnicity”? In this event we invite you to take a closer look at the dynamics of inclusion, exclusion and belonging with two academics working at the forefront of anthropology and social psychology. While re-examining the topic of migration through the lenses of their work, we hope to gain access to a multiplicity of perspectives through a “borderless dialogue”, thus inviting the audience to become participants and to include their own experiences on borders and “migration in the global age”
