

NTU Students Tuned in to the World —Why, What and Then?

By Jean Lin, Director, International Programs, Office of International Affairs

National Taiwan University

This presentation is to share National Taiwan University's endeavors and reflection on the internationalization of students. Since educating for outstanding global citizens is one of the University's missions, the agenda of student internationalization involves engagement of the administration, the departments and the students all together.

Three modes of these efforts are elaborated by recent cases. To end, this presentation focuses on what and how challenges, big and small, could to be met from the viewpoint of an administrator of the International Office. The audience will find in this presentation something familiar and something new, both good as an inspiration for its own practice back at home.
