Full name: Yukari Mitsuhashi
Official Title: Professor and Vice-Director
Faculty/
Department: International Strategy Office

Short Bio:

Prof. Yukari Mitsuhashi is the vice-director of the International Strategy Office of Kyoto University, where she is responsible for strategic planning, coordination and implementation related to the internationalization of the university, both in its domestic affairs and internationally.

With her strong background in international business and education, Yukari has expertise in initiating and coordinating diverse multi-national and multi-cultural projects. After completing her master's degree at the University of the Sacred Heart in Tokyo (majoring in American literature with a particular focus on William Faulkner), she entered the world of business, and spent the next decade working for trading, media, and publishing companies.

Her first post upon returning to academia was at Keio University, where she contributed to promoting international collaboration in research and education, with responsibilities to manage joint research projects, mobility programs, technology transfer and HRD. During that time, she also contributed to the establishment of the Asian host of the World Wide Web Consortium [W3C] on Keio University's Shonan Fujisawa Campus.

After a period of working for Tokyo University of Agriculture and Technology as a professor in their International Center, she joined Kobe University as professor and deputy director of the Office for the Promotion of International Exchange. Her responsibilities focused on marketing, as well as promoting Kobe University's strategic collaboration in research and education with prospective and current partner institutions overseas, particularly those located in Asia and the Americas.

Yukari's diverse experiences of bridging different cultures, including those of academia, industry, Japan, and other countries, demonstrate her strong commitment to a career of fostering global citizens. She has also taught classes on communication skills in multi-lingual/multi-cultural environments, and served as an advisor to the Steering Committee of the Council for Fostering Global Human Resources, organized by the Kansai Economic Federation (Kankeiren). She has completed "College Management Program" at H. John Heinz III School of Public Policy and Management, Carnegie Mellon University (class of 1998).
